

Professor Amelie F. Constant is a Visiting Research Scholar at Princeton University and the Woodrow Wilson School and the Office of Population Research. She is the President of the Society of Government Economists (SGE) and on the board of directors of nonprofit organizations. She is also on the Editorial Board of Applied Economics Quarterly, an affiliated scholar at UNU-MERIT, an academic member of ATINER, and a member of the European Academy of Sciences (2013-) for her outstanding achievements as a researcher. Previously, she was the Program Director of Migration at the Institute for the Study of Labor (2011-2016), and the founding editor of the IZA Journal of Migration (2011-2016). Before that, she was the founding director of DIWDC (2006-2013), a U.S. independent, nonprofit, economics think tank.

Professor Constant's research lies in the economics of migration. As a scholar in the economics of migration, she has written more than sixty eight refereed articles and book chapters and has won several awards for them. She is the co-editor of several books: the Foundations of Migration Economics, the International Handbook of the Economics of Migration, Research in Labor Economics, and two special issues of the Journal of International Manpower. Her research has been funded by several foundations. She has been invited to present her research at many institutions and to deliver keynotes and named lectures. She has also been invited to talk at migration policy panels, and has written more than twenty five other reports and op-ed pieces on migration issues.

As a professor, Constant has fifteen years of experience in teaching undergraduate and graduate classes in economics at Georgetown University, the George Washington University, the University of Alabama in Huntsville and Drexel University. She was also the Vice Dean of the DIW Berlin Graduate School and in charge of the graduate students in DC from 2007-2011. As an extra service to the profession, Professor Constant has organized more than sixty international conferences and events with great success.

Professor Constant received her Ph.D. in Labor Economics and Econometrics from Vanderbilt University in 1998, and had her post-doctoral fellowship at the University of Pennsylvania. She has a B.A. in Economics and Mathematics from the National and Kapodistiako University of Athens, Greece, and an M.A. (D.E.A.) in Economic Development from the University of Paris II, France.
