

Biography

Dr. Colonescu has taught various economics courses since 2001, first at the American University in Bulgaria. In 2006, he started working with MacEwan University, where he teaches Introductory Microeconomics and Macroeconomics, Quantitative Methods, Mathematical Economics, Econometrics, and the Economics of European Union. His research interests cover international trade under imperfect competition, impact evaluation techniques, and income inequality. Dr. Colonescu is an Associate Professor at MacEwan University.

Expertise

Quantitative methods in economics, mathematical economics, applied microeconomic theory, economics of European Union, economics of market integration, game theory, economic reasoning and writing