

Marsida Duli now is health advisor at the Ministry of health in Albania. She is a nephrologist in her profession. Actually she completing her PhD studies in the Medical University of Tirana. Marsida is graduated at the University of Siena, Italy, in Master "Health Services Management". For more than six years she lectured Health Organization in Faculty of Medicine. Her areas of expertise related to health organizing, health management and nephrology service. Marsida has published regularly in national and international scientific journals on topics like health policies, Albanian health system and health services management.