

Dr. Soumen Mukherjee teaches Business Communication and the wide-ranging aspects of Technical English at Presidency University, Bangalore, Karnataka, India. His primary research interests are multi-cultural communication, computer ceded messages and subaltern apparition in the milieu of neo-colonial Literature. He holds a PhD in English from the University of Lucknow on Marginalized consciousness and a Master's in English Literature from Banaras Hindu University with a First class Degree.

In addition to teaching English and guiding research courses for the last almost fifteen years, Dr. Mukherjee has also been widely published in newspapers as well as in both national and international peer-reviewed journals. He is a regular columnist in the leading media outlets of the country, where he consistently writes on human rights and socio-cultural issues. Soumen is the recipient of the prestigious 'BESIG-IATEFL Scholarship' in 2007, from IATEFL, headquartered at University of Kent, Canterbury, UK for his ground-breaking research on Chronemics. A select 'Honorary Non-Member' at Confederation of Indian Industries (CII) and ASSOCHAM (The Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry of India), Dr. Mukherjee has presented many papers on Corporate communications, ELT and Commonwealth/ Post-Colonial English Literature at various international and national conferences, organized by some of the most acclaimed universities in the world.