

Biography of Kwabena D. Ofori-Attah, Ph.D.

I am an Associate Professor of Education. Currently teach at Central State University, Wilberforce OH. I have over 15 years of experience teaching a variety of graduate and undergraduate courses in several universities in the United States. Furthermore, I have over 18 years of experience working in open, distance and technology-mediated learning in higher education. I am also a Research Fellow and a Senior Editor for the African Educational Research Network. In this capacity, I work with international students and reviews papers for publication in The African Symposium, the online journal for the African Educational Research Network. It is located online at <http://www.africanresearch.org> I also prepare international students for studies in the United States. My interests include gender studies and Africa and Middle Eastern Affairs. In (2008) published a book, Going to School in the Middle East and North Africa. I have also published a number of articles in refereed journals, and Encyclopedia of Education (2004), and a number book chapters on global urban education. I have over twelve years of online teaching experience. The courses I teach include educational research, educational technology and professional education courses. I am a member of the Commonwealth of Learning, British Columbia, Canada.