

Dr. Patrizia Parodi

Biography

Dr. Patrizia Parodi is currently working at the Ministry of Health of Italy in infectious diseases. In the past, she worked as a researcher at the WHO-FAO Collaborating Centre for Research and Training in Veterinary Public Health dealing with public health issues, such as health education and zoonoses. She has an extensive experience in international co-operation in public health in Africa, Americas, East European Countries, and Asia. Her first degree was in Veterinary Medicine (University of Pisa, Italy), followed by a degree in Administration and an advanced degree in International Business and Law (University of Modena e Reggio Emilia, Italy). In addition, she got two postgraduate specializations: in animal health (University of Teramo, Italy) and health statistics (University of Rome “La Sapienza”, Italy). She got a master degree in Administration (University of Rome 3, Italy).

She published articles and abstracts for presentation at scientific congresses.

Dr. Parodi is a member of the scientific board of the Italian Society of Tropical Medicine and Global Health.