

Maria Rosaria D'Acerno is professor of English and Linguistics at Università Parthenope in Napoli. She started as researcher at Università l'Orientale with publications on bilingualism and multilingualism. She has studied abroad (Essex University and Reading University), and, as a speaker, has given papers in many international conferences. She has been a member and a researcher at the Mental Health Department of Scuola Antropologico-Trasformativa run by Prof. Sergio Piro, and has completed the five year psychotherapist course at the Mental Health Hospital Frullone in Naples. She has a Master Degree in Clinical Pedagogy (Florence). She graduated in: Lingue e Letterature Straniere (Inglese, Tedesco, Francese), Filosofia, and Lingue, Storia e Culture dei Paesi Islamici (Arabic and Urdu). She has publications in the field of linguistics in various areas from the analysis of political language, to that of advertisements, poetry, literary language and many other subjects. She is now considering the linguistic and socio-cultural problems related to immigrant people. She is a specialist in the field of English for special purposes and has various publications in this field (Sport in English and Speaking English while Drinking Wine). With Irfan Edizioni she has recently published Contrastive Analysis and Translation: Arabic, Italian, English (2011) and Music and Medicine from East to West - Ibn Sīn... - Sergio Piro (2012). She has published with Irfan a first level grammar for students who want to start learning Arabic: Arabic Grammar She is publishing with Aracne Il velo che svela. La donna tra Oriente e Occidente, and with Irfan The World of The Panchatantra .