

I am Professor Emeritus at Bowling Green State University. My primary research interest is Tourism Development of destinations. The focus is on infrastructure and the development of special events and programs to increase number of visitors. The common thread through the research is identifying important variables that influence visitor's decisions. Decision theory is the basis of most of the research articles. All of the research has been qualitative, even though it may appear quantitative.