

Farah Jabbar Hashim (Academic-Biotechnologist lecturer) was born in Baghdad, Iraq, in 1983. She received the B.Sc. degree in biotechnology from the University of Baghdad, Iraq, in 2005, and M.Sc. degrees in Biotechnology/Secondary metabolites from the college of science, Baghdad, Iraq, in 2011.

In 2005, she joined the Department of Biotechnology, University of Baghdad, as an assist. Lecturer, and in 2011 became a Lecturer. Since February 2012 she became a member in contracts committee in Biotechnology Dept., she has been getting a position as a Director of the Dean office in November 2014. Farrah Jabbar responsible for assignments of membership of many organizing committees for conferences, workshops and trainings organized in college of science, Univ. of Baghdad. In addition to giving lectures and many workshops related to active natural products. By 2015 she became the Director of the higher studies in Biotechnology dept. Her current research interests include plant secondary metabolites, natural products, anti-oxidants, cell lines and cytogenetic. Farah Jabbar got distinction award by 2010 for her oral presentation of outstanding research work in the area of plant natural products and their activity against cancer by establishing new mechanisms which presented in 2nd annual international conference of northeast pharmacy research " Sustainable Pharmacy" held in Faculty of Pharmaceutical Science /Mahasarakham University, Thailand. She published her first book by 2012 titled (Effect of ethanolic extract of Curcuma longa (extraction, analysis, anti-cancer, anti-chromosomal aberration) that was chose and publish by Lambert academic publishing.