

Oktay Bingöl is a retired brigadier general of Turkish Armed Forces, the president of Central Strategy Institute based in Ankara/Turkey, and a lecturer in Baskent University. He received BS in Machine Engineering in Turkish Military Academy in Ankara, BA in Business Administration in University of Maryland, MBA from University of Chadwick from USA, and PhD in International Relations from Gazi University in Ankara/Turkey. He also graduated from the Military College in Istanbul and received a Master Degree on Security Studies. While worked as an active officer he was employed in various NATO Headquarters and participated in several peace support operations. He also served as NATO director of a department in ISAF, responsible for establishment of Afghanistan National Army and Police. He worked in the policy and strategy departments of Turkish General Staff. His main fields of specialization and research interests include peace and conflict studies, terrorism, African, Middle East, Asia-Pacific studies, civil-military relations and defense transformation. He has written reports, book chapters, and numerous articles concerning these subjects.