

James D. Savage is a professor of politics at the University of Virginia. His research and teaching focus on comparative budgetary, fiscal, macroeconomic, and economic development policies, with an emphasis on the United States, the European Union, Iraq, and Japan. He is particularly interested in the development of macrobudgetary rules, procedures, and institutions in these countries, and how they influence fiscal outcomes. He is the author of four books, Reconstructing Iraq's Budgetary Institutions: Coalition State Building After Saddam (Cambridge University Press, 2013); Making the EMU: The Politics of Budgetary Surveillance and the Enforcement of Maastricht (Oxford University Press, 2005); Funding Science in America: Congress, Universities, and the Politics of the Academic Pork Barrel (Cambridge University Press, 2000); and Balanced Budgets and American Politics (Cornell University Press, 1989), as well as over twenty journal articles and chapters. He received his Ph.D. in political science, and M.A. in economics, and an M.P.P. in public policy from the University of California, Berkeley. His fellowships include a post-doctoral fellowship with the Department of Government at Harvard University, a Fulbright-European Union Affairs Fellow affiliation with the European Commission, a Council on Foreign Relations-Hitachi International Affairs Fellow affiliation with the Japanese Ministry of Finance, and a Jennings Randolph Senior fellowship at the United States Institute of Peace. He is the recipient of the 2013 Aaron B. Wildavsky Award for Lifetime Scholarly Achievement in budgeting and public financial management. He served as a consultant to the U.S. Congressional Research Service, the U.S. General Accountability Office, and the U.S. Office of Technology Assessment. At the University of Virginia, he has served as Executive Assistant to the President for Federal Relations, Assistant Vice President for Research and Federal Relations, and Director of the graduate Public Administration and Mid-Career Programs.