

Ian Skoggard has a Ph.D. from the Doctorate Program in Anthropology, City University of New York and a M.Div. from Yale University. He is a research anthropologist at the Human Relations Area Files at Yale University and has published on Taiwan economic development and new religions, violent conflict in East Africa, agent based modeling, anthropology of affect, resource stress and cooperation, and American medical missionaries in China. His current interest is in ontology and the anthropology of time.