

Alison Ruth Tobin

I am a senior Honors Student at the University of Arizona, working towards completing a double major in Law and Philosophy and a minor in Spanish. I am extremely passionate about international and comparative law, and I hope to attend law school after graduation and ultimately pursue a career in international business law. This past summer, I had the opportunity to attend Cornell Law's Summer Institute for International and Comparative Law in Paris, France. Here, I participated in Cornell Law classes and developed legal research and writing skills while balancing life abroad. I am currently working as an intern for the Phoenix Committee on Foreign Relations, and extremely excited about joining the Athens Institute for Education and Research's Center for Federalism and Regional Integration as a Research Assistant. In my free time, I enjoy playing my violin, traveling, and spending time with friends and family.
