

Nataša Tomić - Petrović was born in Kranj (Slovenia). She graduated at the Faculty of Law, University of Belgrade, Serbia (average grade A). In 1999 she won the special prize on the Contest of Essays of the Latino-American Center for Administration (CLAD) for her paper about public servants for the 21st century presented in Mexico City. Nataša Tomic defended cum laude her master thesis and got Master degree at the Faculty of Law, University of Belgrade in 2002.

Together with the group of authors she wrote “Manual for participation of public in environmental decision making“, published in Belgrade. She was a member of the group of experts working on the new Law on the system of environmental protection of the Republic of Serbia and preparation of the program for education for environmental protection of the society.

She obtained diploma of the European Public Law Center after passing with distinction the final exam presenting her study and defending it in front of the international jury in 2004. She defended cum laude her doctoral dissertation and got doctoral degree at the Faculty of Law, University of Belgrade. On the open competition of “Andrejević Foundation” her master thesis and her doctoral thesis have both been selected for publication and published as the best in their scientific discipline. Her papers have been published in several scientific journals and presented at national and international conferences.

She specialized in Law in Greece (National and Kapodistrian University of Athens), Czech Republic (Univerzita Karlova) and Belgium (College of Europe). Today she is teaching Traffic Law, Maritime Law, Aviation Law and Legal regulation of transport and Environmental Protection as the full professor at the Faculty of Transport and Traffic Engineering, University of Belgrade, Serbia. She speaks English and French language and improving Italian and modern Greek language.