

Dr. Elena Simona Tomozii

I am currently an Assistant Professor at Transilvania University of Brasov, Romania, Faculty of Psychology and Educational Sciences. I teach students enrolled in undergraduate and postgraduate programs such as: Education, Secondary Primary Education, and Special Education.

In 2015 I completed my PhD in Education at University of Bucharest. My research activity plays an important role in my professional life. Currently the subjects I am interested in are: resilient personality, positive education, wellbeing, social cohesion, work satisfaction, educational leadership;

Since I believe in the power of “doing” and “working together”, the activity in local communities also plays an important role in my professional life, reason why I collaborate with different NGOs and institutions on national and on international level. During the time I was assigned different roles such as: project manager, local coordinator, researcher, trainer or speaker, HR Specialist;
